“ It's crazy how even after all these years, I still miss grandma and think of her nearly every day. She had the most beautiful smile that would light up the room. She gave the best hugs in the whole world. A part of me died when I lost her. She was the first member of the family to truly embrace and accept my (now) husband. Grandma was truly special. One of a kind. I remember eating fruit loops with her and playing Rummikub or cards at the kitchen table. I remember eating Scooby fruit snacks when I would go to visit. The grape ones were always her favorite. I remember going out to eat with her countless times - especially at KFC and Jerzees. I remember watching Wild America, Milo and Otis, Kangaroo Jack, and so many other movies and shows with her. I remember going to get our nails done together and shopping at the mall together for my birthday. I remember her giving me a hard time about the baseball team I liked even while she was battling ALS, she saw me in my spirit jersey...stuck out her tongue and made an x showing she disapproved. I remember that night that we stayed up all night talking about her childhood. She apologized later thinking she had bored me. She never knew how much that night meant. I loved that time with her. I love hearing about her life. She was exceptional. I also admired the way that she loved my grandpa. I always hoped I would find a love like that, and I feel blessed to know that I did. She was such an amazing person, always there for others. She was always there for me. I will always miss you grandma, the ache for your presence in my life will never go away. I love you so much and wish you were here. -Elizabeth

“ May the powerful words written in the bible be able to touch your heart during these emotional and painful moments. Matthew 5:4 reads.. "Happy are those who mourn since they will be comforted." May the father of our Lord Jesus Christ continue to ease the sorrow of your broken heart.
